Applicable procedural law for recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards

1 What is the applicable procedural law for recognition and enforcement of an arbitral award in your jurisdiction? Is your jurisdiction party to treaties facilitating recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards?

Chapter 12 of the Swiss Private International Law Act (PILA) regulates international arbitration, defined as arbitral proceedings seated in Switzerland where, at the time of the conclusion of the arbitration agreement, at least one of the parties did not have its domicile or habitual residence in Switzerland (international Swiss awards).

In regard to international awards rendered in a seat outside Switzerland, ie, “foreign arbitral awards”, their recognition and enforcement are governed directly by the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards of 1958 (New York Convention), pursuant to article 194 of PILA.

International Swiss awards are considered “final” under article 190(1) of the PILA, which is understood to mean that they have the effect of a final and enforceable court judgment and thereby enjoy automatic enforceability. In the rare case in which the parties to the arbitration agreement have expressly agreed to waive some or all grounds for annulment pursuant to article 192(1) of the PILA, in such case, the New York Convention will be deemed applicable to the resulting award, pursuant to article 192(2) of the PILA. Such waiver is available, however, only where none of the parties has its domicile, habitual residence, or a business establishment in Switzerland.

Domestic Swiss awards, just like international Swiss awards, have the effect of a final and enforceable court judgment pursuant to article 387 of the Swiss Code of Civil Procedure of 19 December 2008 (CCP), in force since 1 January 2011. They are therefore immediately enforceable. Domestic arbitration is governed by Part 3 of the CCP, articles 353–399.

The detailed procedures applicable to the enforcement of arbitral awards, including both those rendered in and those rendered outside Switzerland, are set forth in federal statutes. Enforcement of monetary claims is governed by articles 38–55 of the Federal Act on Debt Collection and Insolvency of 11 April 1889 (DEBA). Enforcement of non-monetary claims is governed by articles 335–346 of the CCP.

In addition to being party to the New York Convention, Switzerland is party to the Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes between States and Nationals of Other States

(ICSID Convention or Washington Convention), which entered into force for Switzerland on 14 June 1968.

Switzerland has signed over 140 bilateral investment treaties (BITs) and other treaties containing investment provisions, most of which are currently in force. So far, only Germany and China have signed more BITs than Switzerland.

2 Is the state a party to the 1958 New York Convention? If yes, what is the date of entry into force of the Convention? Was there any reservation made under article I(3) of the Convention?

Yes. The New York Convention entered into force for Switzerland on 30 August 1965. Upon accession, Switzerland had made a reciprocity reservation. However, the reservation was withdrawn on 23 April 1993 when Chapter 12 of the PILA, and article 194 thereof, entered into force.

Recognition proceedings

3 Which court has jurisdiction over an application for recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards?

For recognition and enforcement of domestic and foreign arbitral awards granting monetary relief, a request for debt collection must be filed with the local debt collection office located, in general, at the award debtor’s place of domicile or registered office, pursuant to articles 46–55 of the DEBA. If the award debtor objects to payment, then the creditor can request a competent court at the place of the debt collection proceedings (the competent court within a particular canton is determined by cantonal legislation) to set aside the debtor’s objection.

For recognition and enforcement of domestic and foreign arbitral awards granting non-monetary relief, under article 339(1) of the CCP, the award creditor must file its request with the court located (i) at the domicile or seat of the unsuccessful party, (ii) where the measures are to be taken, or (iii) where the decision to be enforced was rendered.

For mere recognition (stand-alone exequatur) of foreign arbitral awards, a request must be filed with the court defined by article 339 of the CCP and the applicable cantonal legislation.

4 What are the requirements for the court to have jurisdiction over an application for recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards? Must the applicant identify assets within the jurisdiction of the court that will be the subject of enforcement for the purpose of recognition proceedings?

The court will have jurisdiction over an application for recognition and enforcement if: the debtor is domiciled in Switzerland; the debtor has a branch in Switzerland and the claim to be enforced is derived from the operations of that branch; the debt is secured by a pledge or mortgage and the chattel or the real estate is located in Switzerland; or the foreign debtor has assets located in Switzerland and the creditor has obtained an attachment order against such assets pursuant to articles 271–281 of the DEBA.

For the purposes of mere recognition proceedings, the applicant need not identify assets in Switzerland.

5 Are the recognition proceedings in your jurisdiction adversarial or ex parte?

Recognition proceedings in Switzerland are adversarial.

6 What documentation is required to obtain the recognition of an arbitral award?

An application for recognition of a foreign arbitral award must be accompanied by the following documents, as per article IV(1) of the New York Convention:

- the duly authenticated original award, or a duly certified copy thereof (article IV(1)(a));
- the original of the arbitration agreement or a duly certified copy thereof (article IV(1)(b)); and
- translations of the award and the arbitration agreement into one of the official languages of Switzerland: German, French or Italian.

The Swiss courts, in general, do not take a formalistic approach to these requirements. For example, if the award is rendered in English and the particular Swiss court is comfortable with using English, the court might not require a translation into one of the official Swiss languages. Furthermore, authentication of the award will not be required where the award debtor does not dispute its authenticity.

7 If the required documentation is drafted in another language than the official language of your jurisdiction, is it necessary to submit a translation together with an application to obtain recognition of an arbitral award? If yes, in what form must the translation be?

As noted in response to question 6, Swiss courts may dispense with the requirement of submitting the award and the arbitration agreement in an official Swiss language in accordance with article IV(2) of the New York Convention. According to Swiss legal scholars, the Swiss enforcement court must accept a translation of a foreign award into any of the three official languages (German, French or Italian), even if the translation is not in the official language of the enforcement court.

Rules on authentication and certification vary from canton to canton. Some cantons provide for sworn translators; other cantons authorise public notaries to certify translations as to their correctness; in yet other cantons, the court may appoint a translator to prepare a translation. Swiss consular and diplomatic agents can also certify translations. Consistent with the less formalistic approach of Swiss courts, in general, it is only necessary that the consular agent certify the correctness of the first and last page of the translation of an arbitral award, including the particulars of the parties and the dispositive part of the award.

8 What are the other practical requirements relating to recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards?

An application to a Swiss debt collection office to enforce a monetary award must be accompanied by a maximum filing fee of 400 Swiss francs for a claim over 1 million Swiss francs. If the debtor files a formal opposition, the applicant must pay a maximum court fee of 2,000 Swiss francs to commence summary court proceedings.

9 Do courts recognise and enforce partial or interim awards?

Swiss courts recognise and enforce partial awards that decide on one or more prayers for relief or claims and finally resolve a part of the dispute. Such awards have res judicata effect.

In contrast, interim or preliminary awards, understood as decisions that clarify a preliminary issue, are not enforced but may be recognised. For example, a preliminary award by a tribunal in Switzerland upholding its jurisdiction has res judicata effect and will bind a court or tribunal later seized with the matter.

The determination of whether a decision constitutes an “award” depends not on the words used to describe it, but rather on the contents of the decision. Procedural orders and orders of provisional measures are not enforceable as awards, but costs awards are considered final decisions constituting awards. A settlement embodied in a “consent award” that finally resolves one or more of the claims may be recognised and enforced as an award.

10 What are the grounds on which an award may be refused recognition? Are the grounds applied by the courts different from the ones provided under article V of the Convention?

With respect to foreign awards, the grounds enumerated in article V of the New York Convention are the exclusive grounds on which a Swiss court may refuse recognition and enforcement. Swiss courts interpret these grounds restrictively. Even where one of the grounds is found to have been established, the Swiss courts have discretion to grant enforcement and recognition. In the past 20 years, enforcement has been denied in only two instances, evidencing Switzerland’s stance as an arbitration-friendly jurisdiction.

Regarding international Swiss awards, the available grounds for annulment are those provided for in article 190(2) of the PILA, which are largely similar to those under the New York Convention.

11 What is the effect of a decision recognising the award in your jurisdiction? Is it immediately enforceable? What challenges are available against a decision recognising an arbitral award in your jurisdiction?

There are three types of decisions recognising an award in Switzerland. First, it is possible to request from a competent court (defined by article 339 of the CCP and by cantonal legislation) a stand-alone exequatur decision declaring the recognition and enforceability of an award without further proceedings. Such a decision gives the award res judicata effect and makes the award immediately enforceable. Second, an award creditor may initiate execution proceedings for monetary or non-monetary relief without requesting a declaration of recognition and enforceability. In this case, exequatur is decided only as a preliminary question, does not appear in the operative part of the court’s decision, and lacks res judicata effect. Third, a party may combine its request for exequatur with execution proceedings.

A party may appeal a decision granting exequatur to the higher cantonal court and, if unsuccessful, may appeal to the Swiss Federal Supreme Court. The appeal, however, has no automatic suspensive effect on the decision on exequatur or the decision on execution.

A party may appeal a decision to set aside the debtor's objection in debt enforcement proceedings to the higher cantonal court and, if unsuccessful, to the Swiss Federal Supreme Court.

12 What challenges are available against a decision refusing to recognise an arbitral award in your jurisdiction?

Where exequatur is denied, a party may appeal to the higher cantonal court, and again to the Swiss Federal Supreme Court.

A decision granting the debtor's objection in debt enforcement proceedings may be appealed to the higher cantonal court and, if unsuccessful, to the Swiss Federal Supreme Court.

13 Will the courts adjourn the recognition or enforcement proceedings pending the outcome of annulment proceedings at the seat of the arbitration? What trends, if any, are suggested by recent decisions? What are the factors considered by courts to adjourn recognition or enforcement?

The enforcement court has discretion to adjourn enforcement proceedings pending the outcome of annulment proceedings at the seat of the arbitration, under article VI of the New York Convention. The award debtor must establish on a prima facie basis that the award is likely to be set aside, and that its request is not merely a dilatory tactic. The enforcement court may consider all relevant factors, including the likelihood of success of the annulment proceedings, although the award debtor's financial stability is not likely to be considered as a sufficient reason to stay enforcement.

Recognition proceedings, unlike enforcement proceedings, are not subject to adjournment in Switzerland, consistent with article VI of the New York Convention.

14 If the courts adjourn the recognition or enforcement proceedings pending the annulment proceedings, will the defendant to the recognition or enforcement proceedings be ordered to post security? What are the factors considered by courts to order security? Based on recent case law, what are the form and amount of the security to be posted by the party resisting enforcement?

The enforcement court may, at the request of the party seeking enforcement, require the award debtor to post suitable security. The practice of courts regarding the ordering of security varies to a large extent from one canton to another.

In principle, the security needs to be paid in cash or provided in the form of a bank guarantee issued by a Swiss bank.

15 Is it possible to obtain the recognition and enforcement of an award that has been fully or partly set aside at the seat of the arbitration? In case the award is set aside after the decision recognising the award has been issued, what challenges are available against this decision?

An award that has been fully set aside at the seat of arbitration will, in general, be denied recognition and enforcement in Switzerland, consistent with article V(1)(e) of the New York Convention. Current Swiss case law does not entirely exclude the possibility, however, that an award that was set aside at the seat of the arbitration might be enforced under extraordinary circumstances. However, the Swiss courts have not been called upon to address such circumstances.

Where an award has been partly set aside at the seat of the arbitration, and where the portion that is set aside is severable from the portion that has not been set aside, leading Swiss scholarly writing indicates that it is possible to obtain recognition and enforcement of the portion that has not been set aside.

If the award is set aside at the seat of the arbitration after a Swiss court has issued a decision recognising or granting enforcement of the award, scholarly writing supports the view that the award debtor may request cancellation of the decision granting enforcement, applying article V(1)(e) of the New York Convention by analogy.

Service

16 What is the applicable procedure for service of extrajudicial and judicial documents to a defendant in your jurisdiction?

Service of procedural documents issued during arbitral proceedings, including orders and awards, is to be effected according to the applicable, relevant rules chosen by the parties – be it directly or by reference to specific arbitration rules or decided by the arbitral tribunal.

Where the seat of arbitration is in Switzerland and a party in Switzerland refuses to accept delivery of an international award, the arbitral tribunal may request judicial assistance under PILA, article 185. The Swiss court would apply CCP, articles 136–141.

Service of judicial documents in Switzerland, ie, documents issued within state court proceedings, is governed by CCP, articles 136–141. In general, service is effected through the court by means of registered mail and/or mail against return receipt or, upon agreement of the recipient, by electronic means. In addition, in case the recipient's domicile in Switzerland is unknown or service of process is impossible or impracticable, or the recipient has not named an agent for service of process, then service may be effected by publication in the official cantonal or federal gazette.

Swiss law does not contain provisions on service of extrajudicial documents.

17 What is the applicable procedure for service of extrajudicial and judicial documents to a defendant out of your jurisdiction?

Service of procedural documents issued during arbitral proceedings, including orders and awards, is to be effected according to the applicable, relevant rules chosen by the parties – be it directly or by reference to specific arbitration rules – or decided by the arbitral tribunal.

Where a party prevents service from being effected, the arbitral tribunal can request a Swiss court to proceed by way of judicial assistance in accordance with the Hague Convention of 15 November 1965 on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil and Commercial Matters or the Hague Convention relating to civil procedure of 1 March 1954.

The provisions governing the service of judicial and extrajudicial documents on a defendant located outside of Switzerland depend on the defendant's state of domicile.

Switzerland is party to the Hague Convention of 15 November 1965 on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil or Commercial Matters and to the Hague Convention relating to civil procedure of 1 March 1954. If the defendant is located in a country not party to said Conventions and no bilateral treaty exists, the Swiss authorities apply the Hague Convention relating to civil procedure of 1 March 1954.

Identification of assets

18 Are there any databases or publicly available registers allowing the identification of an award debtor's assets within your jurisdiction?

There are several databases and publicly available registers that may be useful for identifying an award debtor's assets, as well as the status of a debtor. Some of the registers allow one to search by the owner's name. For example:

- The Swiss Land Registry provides public access to ownership details for identified properties and details of certain registered charges, and a person showing a legitimate interest may request additional information.
- The Swiss Car Registry, Ship Registration Office, and Maritime Navigation Registry Office provide ownership and other information regarding motor vehicles, inland ships, and deep-sea vessels and yachts sailing under Swiss flag, respectively.
- The Swiss Aircraft Registry provides information regarding Swiss registered aircraft, and it is possible to search by the owner's or holder's name.
- Trademarks, patents and designs are registered with the Swiss Federal Institute of Intellectual Property, and may be searched by the owner's name.
- Financial and auditing reports of companies listed in Switzerland are published on the website of the relevant exchange: the SIX Swiss stock exchange or the BX Berne eXchange.
- Information regarding individual debtors and corporations subject to debt enforcement or bankruptcy proceedings may be obtained from the debt collection and bankruptcy offices by certain interested persons.
- Ownership of certain tangible assets may be registered at the debt collection office where the acquirer of the asset is domiciled, and such records are publicly accessible.

19 Are there any proceedings allowing for the disclosure of information about an award debtor within your jurisdiction?

An award debtor will not be compelled to disclose the existence and location of assets during attachment or enforcement proceedings.

Enforcement proceedings

20 Are interim measures against assets available in your jurisdiction? May award creditors apply such interim measures against assets owned by a sovereign state?

As described in question 25, the courts may order the attachment of assets as an interim measure in Switzerland, including on an ex parte basis, pursuant to articles 271–281 of the DEBA. Alternatively, and only in the case of fraudulent or criminal acts, a creditor may request a freezing order under the Swiss criminal procedure law.

An award creditor may obtain interim measures against assets owned by a sovereign state, provided that the assets are not subject to immunity. For instance, the asset must not have been allocated to activities of the sovereign state in the exercise of its sovereign powers (jure imperii). (For more details, see question 31.)

21 What is the procedure to apply interim measures against assets in your jurisdiction? Is it a requirement to obtain prior court authorisation before applying interim measures? If yes, are such proceedings ex parte?

The main interim measure against assets is an attachment order (articles 271–281, DEBA). An award creditor may seek an order of attachment on an ex parte basis. The procedures are described under question 25.

22 What is the procedure for interim measures against immovable property within your jurisdiction?

The main interim measure against immovable property is an attachment order (articles 271–281, DEBA). Special regulations on the enforcement against real estate will apply, eg, the Ordinance of the Swiss Supreme Court on the Enforcement on Real Estate.

23 What is the procedure for interim measures against moveable property within your jurisdiction?

The main interim measure against moveable property is an attachment order (articles 271–281, DEBA). In the context of enforcement against moveable property, Switzerland has special legislation and is a signatory state to a number of specific conventions containing provisions on the seizure of and enforcement against moveable property, including aircraft and ships.

24 What is the procedure for interim measures against intangible property within your jurisdiction?

There is no specific procedure in place, but trademarks and patents registered with the Swiss Federal Institute of Intellectual Property may be seized according to normal attachment proceedings.

25 What is the procedure to attach assets in your jurisdiction? Is it a requirement to obtain prior court authorisation before attaching assets? If yes, are such proceedings ex parte?

A party seeking enforcement may obtain a civil attachment order (freezing order) pursuant to articles 271–281 of the DEBA. Attachment proceedings may be conducted ex parte before a competent court at the award debtor's seat in Switzerland or where the assets are located. The requirements for an attachment depend on whether it is requested prior to, or after, issuance of an award.

At the pre-award or pre-judgment stage, a party seeking an attachment must establish prima facie that:

- it has a mature and unsecured claim against the debtor;
- at least one of the statutory reasons under article 271(1)(1)–(5) DEBA is fulfilled, namely:
 - the debtor has no permanent place of residence in Switzerland;
 - the debtor is concealing its assets, absconding or making preparations to abscond in order to evade the fulfillment of its obligations;
 - the debtor is traveling through Switzerland or belongs to the category of persons who visits fairs and markets and the creditor's claim is to be fulfilled immediately;
 - the debtor does not have its residence or seat in Switzerland, and the claim has a sufficient connection with Switzerland or is backed by a signed acknowledgment of debt;
 - the creditor holds a certificate of shortfall against the debtor;
- the debtor has assets located in Switzerland.

The condition of a sufficient link with Switzerland is often one of the main issues that arises in a civil attachment proceeding. Such a link will be found to exist when, for instance, the underlying agreement has been entered into or must be performed at least partially in Switzerland or when a payment must be made in Switzerland, or when the contract is subject to Swiss law or provides for Swiss jurisdiction.

Based on article 271(1)(6) of the DEBA, once an award or judgment confirming the claim has been issued (and in other cases determined by article 80(2) of the DEBA), it is not necessary to establish a sufficient link with Switzerland, and a party seeking an attachment need only establish prima facie that:

- it has a mature and unsecured claim against the debtor; and
- the debtor has assets located in Switzerland.

The assets and their location must be precisely indicated in the request. As a preliminary question, the judge will examine prima facie whether the formal and substantive requirements of the New York Convention are met.

Court fees for a civil attachment request are a maximum of 2,000 Swiss francs. The court may require the applicant to provide security.

Documents produced by the applicant must be translated into the language of the specific court, either German, French or Italian, depending on the region of Switzerland. The court typically renders a decision within a day.

Once the attachment is granted, the debtor may file an objection with the judge within 10 days of the receipt of the attachment minutes, and an adverse decision on the objection may be appealed to the higher cantonal court, and then to the Swiss Federal Supreme Court. Such an objection or appeal will not, however, render the attachment ineffective during the course of those proceedings. If the attachment is granted and the debtor does not successfully challenge it, the award creditor must commence debt collection proceedings within 10 days, or the attachment order will lapse.

26 What is the procedure for enforcement measures against immoveable property within your jurisdiction?

See questions 22 to 24.

27 What is the procedure for enforcement measures against moveable property within your jurisdiction?

See questions 22 to 24.

28 What is the procedure for enforcement measures against intangible property within your jurisdiction?

See questions 22 to 24.

Enforcement against foreign states

29 Are there any rules in your jurisdiction that specifically govern recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards against foreign states?

Switzerland has not enacted legislation specifically governing recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards against foreign states. In general, Switzerland applies the doctrine of restricted immunity of states, whereby the foreign state generally enjoys immunity from claims arising out of activities performed in the exercise of sovereign authority (jure imperii). Activities performed by the foreign state of a commercial nature (jure gestionis) do not generally enjoy immunity.

Switzerland is an early signatory to the 1972 European Convention on State Immunity, and ratified the United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and their Property on 16 April 2010 that also regulates state immunity questions. The latter Convention, which codifies the principle of restricted immunity, is not yet in force, as it has yet to be ratified by 30 countries.

30 What is the applicable procedure for service of extrajudicial and judicial documents to a foreign state?

Since Switzerland is a party to the European Convention on State Immunity of 16 May 1972, service of judgments and of documents by which proceedings are instituted is governed by article 16 of the Convention, which provides that service is deemed to have been effected by the receipt of such documents by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Service of documents on other foreign countries not party to the Convention would have to be effected in accordance with the laws of the relevant foreign state.

31 Are assets belonging to a foreign state immune from enforcement in your jurisdiction? If yes, are there exceptions to such immunity?

As a preliminary comment, under article 177(2) of the PILA, states and state entities cannot assert immunity from the jurisdiction of an arbitral tribunal or contest their capacity by invoking the state's own laws.

The fact that a state has entered into an arbitration agreement does not, by itself, allow the award to be executed against the foreign state's assets. There are three conditions that must be fulfilled in order for the award creditor to execute against state assets:

- The claim to be enforced arose from an act performed in a commercial capacity (acta jura gestionis);
- There is an "appropriate connection" between the legal relationship giving rise to the claim and Switzerland; and
- The assets of the state against which enforcement is sought are neither allocated/earmarked to nor intended for the state's sovereign activities, pursuant to DEBA, article 92(1)(11).

The requirement of an "appropriate connection" is fulfilled where the legal relationship underlying the claim arose, was performed, or was required to be performed, in Switzerland. It is not sufficient, however, that a debtor has assets or the claimant is domiciled in Switzerland.

If it comes into effect, the United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property may change Swiss law by restricting parties' ability to seek interim relief against sovereign assets, and may change the presumption that sovereign immunity only covers monetary assets that have been earmarked for public purposes.

32 Is it possible for a foreign state to waive immunity from enforcement in your jurisdiction? If yes, what are the requirements of such waiver?

A foreign state may waive immunity from execution. Where a state expressly and without reservation waives execution immunity upon entering into an agreement, even the state's assets being used for governmental purposes will become subject to execution, except for certain classes of assets, such as military goods or an embassy building.
